February 6, 2009 - G&S Real Estate Advisors has launched a new company that will offer a range of services to public and private development firms, successor developers, nationally based lenders, regional banks, private equity firms and publicly traded equity firms.

G&S Real Estate Advisors is a real estate development, construction management and asset management company that focuses on condominium communities, residential mixed-use developments and master planned single family communities. For over 25 years, G&S services include development management, construction management, structuring & acquiring of capital sources, implementation of strategic sales and marketing programs, property management and asset management.

G&S Real Estate Advisors plans to offer advice and resolutions to lenders and owners facing challenging, even critical, situations. G&S Real Estate Advisors has a two-pronged approach: it is positioned to acquire financially-strained or foreclosed properties from owners and lenders; it's also available to handle assignments for services such as managing and marketing developments, completing construction of troubled projects, offering advisory services, and even selling condos. Our goal, according to Robert Glantz-partner, is to create a legacy property that achieves both financial and personal reward to our client and their customers.
